

Selection of Construction Materials

The British Council for Offices has published Good Practice in the Selection of Construction Materials 2011. The BCO had originally published the guide in 1997 and then re-published it in 2002. The 2011 guide makes amendments to section 2, (where references to individual materials have been widened to refer to an entire category of materials) and there is an increased emphasis on the impact that using certain construction materials may have on the environment. Clients and developers should update the materials clauses in their construction documents to refer to the latest guidance.